Peterborough's history is as lively as the City and County are today. Membership in the Historical Society keeps you informed and gives you a richer engagement with history.

The Peterborough Historical Society is one of Ontario's oldest historical societies and has played a lead role in preserving and promoting the social and cultural history of Peterborough and region. Its goal is to generate public interest in local history through education and engagement in a variety of activities, including publications, conferences and a monthly series of speakers, panels and workshops. The Society owns and operates Hutchison House Museum, a living history museum with exhibits and programs that illuminate the social history of Peterborough.

The PHS is a not-for-profit organization that relies largely on membership fees and donations to support its programs and services.
